commitment

When a Harvard physician claimed, more than a century ago, that higher education jeopardized women's health, AAUW conducted research that proved he was wrong. When the number of female college students grew, AAUW funded fellowships to support them. When girls and boys were treated differently in school, AAUW research put gender bias on the national agenda.

Since its first meeting in 1881, the American Association of University Women has been a catalyst for change. Today, with more than 100,000 members and 1,300 branches committed to education and equity, AAUW members across the country contribute to a more promising future and provide a powerful voice for women and girls—a voice that cannot and will not be ignored.

You strengthen that voice.

Join AAUW, an organization that acts on your behalf and gives you opportunities to take action.

- ▶ Providing a national network of like-minded individuals
